

LICENSING ROLLOUT 2012

The Essential Moves School Programme is a generic sensory integration & training package for primary schools & teachers . Once trained , teachers are able to implement sensory integration activities as part of their daily lessons.

Licensees will be given an exclusive area with all the materials to present the training and provide ongoing support to the local schools. The license to on-sell the Essential Moves Programme to schools and train teachers in its use, is being rolled out around Australia in 2012

The School Programme is generic, but will identify children needing more individual attention. This can be provided by clinic programs already established or other professional treatment, so it will support businesses already involved with this area

Information sessions are planned for the dates below for interested practitioners.

The license would suit a person who currently works with children in a clinic setting or a teacher. Successful licensees will be outgoing, have an interest in sensory integration and learning and be confident, once trained, and able to run training for large groups of teachers.
